HAHNEMANN BENEFIT.

Splendid Performances to Be Given at the Lyceum.

While every one is ready and willing to give for a deserving charity, it is not often that an opportunity is offered as in the case of the Hahnemann hospital benefit, to take place on the evenings of Friday and Saturday of this week and the Monday following. Not only is the cause a most worthy ere, but to those who buy tickets is offered an entertainment in every way orth their attention, outside the fact hat the money invested does so much o help a most worthy cause. At every performance there will be to some extent a change of programme, so that in order to see all of this most excellent erformance one must surely attend at least three of the entertainments, every portion of which will be so good that ne will be sorry if any of it is missed That every taste might be catered to, ach programme will contain different cenes from different operas, beside various dances, marches and stage pictures galore, with music both light. eavy and popular, and as the entertainment of last year did, so will this one hit the taste of the amusementloving people to a nicety. The costuming of the whole will be a big feature. while special scenery for the different acts will brighten up the general effect it every case.

The advance tickets are selling very ast, and it stands one in hand to be arly at the box office at the opening sale in order to secure good scats for any of the performances. RIGHTEOUSNESS, TEMPERANCE AND JUDGMENT TO COME.

Rev. Dr. McLeod in His Sermon Yesterday Morning Said There Was Never a Time When St. Paul's Words to Felix Needed to Be Emphasized More Than at Present. Doctrines He Laid Down Ought to Be Impressed on Minds of All

Rev. James McLeod, D. D., in the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning preached from the text, "St Paul Before Felix." His text was from Acts xxiv:25, as follows: "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled. discussion of this question at the and answered: Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." Dr. McLeod We are all familiar with the circumstant that brought St. Paul into the presence of Felix, that brought St. Paul into the presence of Felix, the Roman Procurator. It is a notable charter in the Hie of St. Paul, and in the history of the Apostolia church. St. Paul's visit to Jerus salour, and the attempt to kill him; his time! rescue from a mob of murderers; bis ride s isomeback from Jerusalem to Caesorea, under the protection of a military escort: his arraignment before Felix, and his manly and successful defence; his pointed address which made the guilty governor tremble; his fidelity to the cause of Christ, and his complete self-control n one of the great crises of his life; all this he historian relates with considerable fullness It is a most exciting story from beginning end; and "it is profitable for dectrine, reproof, for correction, and for instruction When St. Paul was arraigned before Pelix, accusers made three charges against him. (1 Lawlessness and sedicion. They said: "We have found this man a pestilent fellow, and a move of sedition among all the Jews," (2) We charge him with being "a ringleader sect of the Nazarenes," (3) Profamity. He has "gone about to profane the temple." The plaintiffs employed a lawyer named Ter tullus to prosecute the case. He was both a Roman and an orator, but he was a disgrace to both. He sought the conviction of St. Paul-not by the manly method of Roman justice, but by the unmanly and unrighteeus method of spicable and corrupt Roman judge.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

To each charge, St. Paul pleaded not guilty. He stated his case so plainly, and in such cogent terms that his accusers were contounded. They on realized that the judge-corrupt though b was-was against them.

St. Paul's speech, in respect of its manner, was the opposite of that made by Tursullus; and in respect of its matter, it was all that denied the charges of his accurers, and he chal-lenged them to the proof. "Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me." it clear, that in holding and teaching what they called heretical doctrines, he was not guilty of violating any Roman law. He proved conclsively that the two charges that were crimina were not true; and that the one charge, that rom this point of view, was true, was to criminal. The prosecution was a conspicuous failure, S Paul's defence was complete. The judge say that the plaintiffs had no case, and he ough to have dismissed it. But he had a reason, a selfish and corrupt reason, for not doing so, and therefore he kept St. Paul in custody. "After certain days," Felix sent for St. Paul in order that Drusitht and be might hear who the apostle had to say "concerning the faith in Christ." It was a private interview, and Felly and his wife were a the Felix discovered no such compliment as Tectu has bestowed upon him, "Plunkeyism" is word that both Timekeray and Kingsley and Tertullus, What Tertuilus was to Vel Felix had been to the Emperor Claudias. It v because of his sycophancy, that Claudias pro-moted him, and be who had been a slave be-came a despot. Tucitus tells us that Felix waends for big gains.
